The Edinburgh Bahá'í Centre is the realization of a seed sown by Abdu'l-Bahá during his visit to Edinburgh in 1913. It will be highly gratifying to advise the Universal House of Justice that the current deficit of £250,000 has been cleared during Centenary celebrations in 2013.

Donations can be made to:

Account name: Edinburgh Centre Fund.

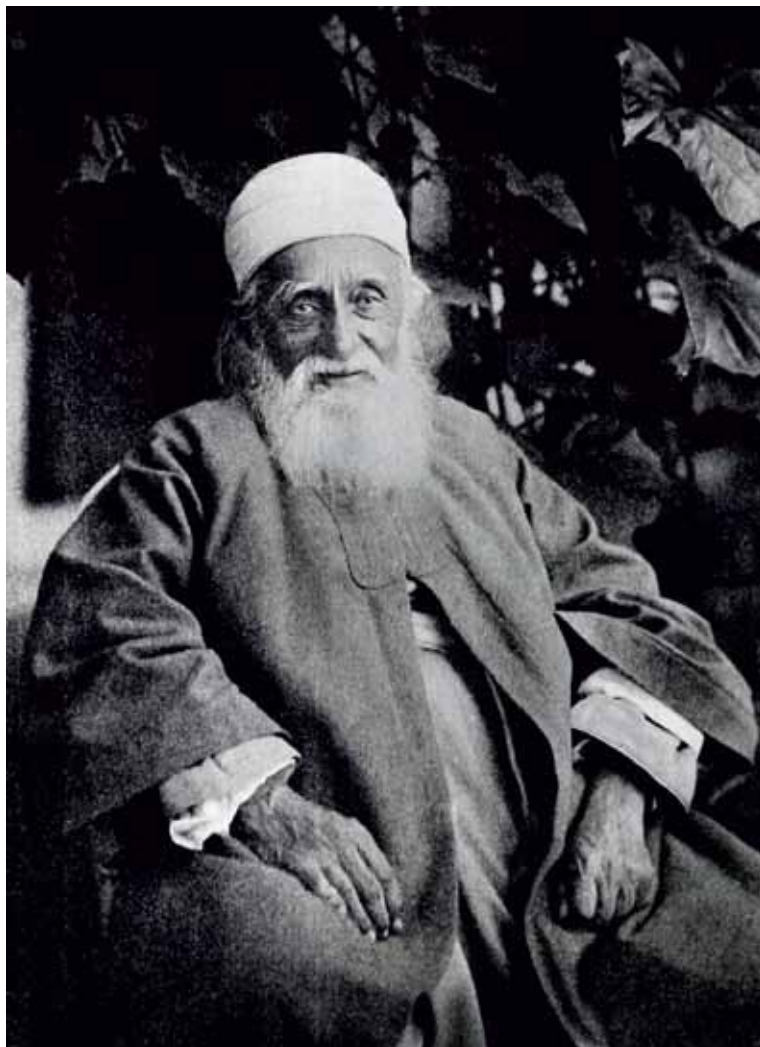

Or by cheque to NSA earmarked for Edinburgh Centre Fund.

(only registered Bahá'ís can contribute)

The Universal House of Justice was delighted to learn that your new Bahá'í Centre is to be officially opened. This occasion marks a significant step forward for the Bahá'í community of Edinburgh, no less for the Scottish Bahá'í community as a whole. It is gratifying that in a city of such significance, one blessed to have been visited by 'Abdu'l-Bahá nearly a century ago, a property of such distinction has been acquired in the name of the Faith.

Meetings for Dignitaries

A Member of the Scottish Parliament requested a meeting with Bahá'ís at the Centre, which took place on 27 March 2012.

The House of Justice feels confident that this development will reinforce the efforts of the Bahá'ís of Scotland to reach out to their compatriots, through the community-building activities in which they are engaged, and share with them the vision of the harmonious, just, and peaceful society that Bahá'u'lláh's Teachings aim to foster. You may be assured of its prayers for the realization of this lofty aim.
